Series 1: Safeguarding the Rule of Law in these Challenging Times

Episode 1: Safeguarding the Rule of Law

EPISODE TITLE: Safeguarding the Rule of Law

EPISODE SUMMARY: The introduction of Emergency legislation in response to the Covid-19 pandemic has been immediate, understandable and effective. But often it has been drafted and delivered without allowing for judicial oversight. What is the role of the judiciary in ensuring emergency legislation does not impinge on the rights of the citizen? How can the judiciary ensure that domestic safeguards are upheld and international standards are followed? In this episode, we talk about these issues with Judge José Igreja Matos, President of the European Association of Judges, and hear about court challenges to emergency legislation in the Czech Republic from Dr. Jan Grinc, Professor at Charles University. Judge Katica Artukovic from Bosnia Herzegovina also provides an on-the-ground view from the bench during the pandemic, and we shine a spotlight on the Brijuni Statement on Judicial Independence, a regional statement that highlights many of the principles examined in this episode.
